Chamber's Colwell resigns for dream job

Naomi Colwell, Greater Brighton Area Chamber of Commerce executive director, announced Thursday she is resigning to pursue what she has called "an opportunity of a lifetime," the Chamber board of directors stated in a letter to its membership.

"Naomi is leaving the Greater Brighton Area Brighton Chamber of Commerce to pursue her dream job of executive director of the Aurora Police Foundation," the directors' letter stated. "If you know Naomi, you know she has a big heart and passion for the Aurora PD. It is her heart and passion we will miss the most."

The letter also noted: "In less than two years, through Naomi's leadership, we have experienced a complete turnaround for our Chamber that has yielded amazing results: fully staffed; new programs and events; increased membership with new and past businesses; completed a successful audit and review of our financial policies; renewed partnerships with local organizations.

Colwell's last day will be March 1. Chamber officials said a hiring committee is in place and the position will be posted soon. Anyone with questions, concerns or interest in joining the hiring committee should contact board members.

"We are grateful for everything Naomi has brought to our Chamber and community and will move forward in our pursuit of an excellent candidate to build upon our current success," the board letter stated.
